Hundreds upon hundreds of rings, earrings, necklaces, bracelets, bolos, buckles and watchbands fill the spacious store's artfully-designed cases, featuring Navajo, Zuni and Santo Dominto works by such famous artists as Begay, Nezzie, Yellowhorse and Zazzie.

Wells Fargo Old Town History Museum Open For Visitors

In the 1850s Old Town San Diego was the county seat for one of the largest, least populated counties of California. During the town's formative years, Wells Fargo & Co. played a major role by opening doors for San Diegans to the outside world with its express, mail, stagecoaching and banking services.

Wells Fargo has returned to Old Town with a nostalgia-filled, hands-on History Museum in the former State of California Visitor Center at the corner of San Diego Avenue and Mason Street.

The 1,000 square foot Old Town History Museum features an authentic Abbot-Downing Concord stagecoach purchased by Wells Fargo in 1867, an audio-visual theater and displays highlighting documents and express business furniture and fixtures.

Visitors may thumb through records kept by San Diego merchant and Wells Fargo agent, Ephraim W. Morse, from the 1860s. Also on display are balance scales, 1850-era coins and other priceless artifacts, many relating to San Diego's history.

Michael Shanahan, a San Diego State graduate and a resident of La Mesa, has been appointed curator of the museum.

Plans call for the museum to occupy the remodeled structure for two to three years until the new, larger, permanent quarters are built nearby.

The History Museum, Wells Fargo's fourth in California, is open seven days a week from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

As in other Wells Fargo museums in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Sacramento, the curator will be on site to conduct tours and present lectures for school children and others.

"We have been planning an Old Town Museum for many years," said Andy Anderson, vice president and manager of the bank's History Department. "We are thrilled that this dream is finally about to become a reality. We know San Diegans will take pride in their history as they examine records, documents and artifacts which have been preserved, in many case, for more than a century."

Aerospace Historical Center Brings History To Life

The San Diego Aerospace Museum and the International Aerospace Hall of Fame are devoted to the preservation of our nation's air and space history. Taken together, the two museums provide a unique history of aviation and aerospace — the Hall of Fame through the great men and women of that history, and the Aerospace Museum through its dazzling collection of aircraft, spacecraft and associated artifacts — bringing to life the significant events associated with flight and space exploration.

Open daily from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; $4.00 for adults, $1.00 for juniors 6-17, Military in uniform and members free. 234-8291 or 232-8322.

Sea World is Home to Vast Collection of Mammals, Fish and Birds

Sea World is home to a staggering number of marine animals representing the full spectrum of aquatic life from the simplest invertebrates to highly evolved whales and dolphins. More than 10,000 fish, 200 marine mammals and 1,500 birds are housed in Sea World of California facilities, giving the park one of the largest and most widely respected collections of marine life in the world.

Sixteen species of marine mammals are displayed at Sea World — everything from Alaska sea otters rescued from the 1989 oil spill in Prince William Sound, to the striking and seldom-seen Commerson's dolphin. Harbor seals, pilot whales, sea lions, walruses and false killer whales also can be seen.

But the cornerstone of Sea World's collection of marine mammals remains the star killer whales of Shamu Stadium. The residents of the 5 million-gallon, 6,500-seat stadium increased their number by one in September of 1988 with the birth of killer whale calf Baby Shamu.

Successful breeding programs have bolstered the numbers of several other marine mammal species at Sea World. More than 60 bottlenose dolphin calves and 100 California sea lion pups have been born at Sea World parks.

Today park visitors have the opportunity to see, touch and even feed many of these bottlenose dolphin offspring at the park's Dolphin Pool. Guests also may feed California sea lions and harbor seals at the Pinniped Exhibit and watch sea otters, walruses and Commerson's dolphins in their own displays.

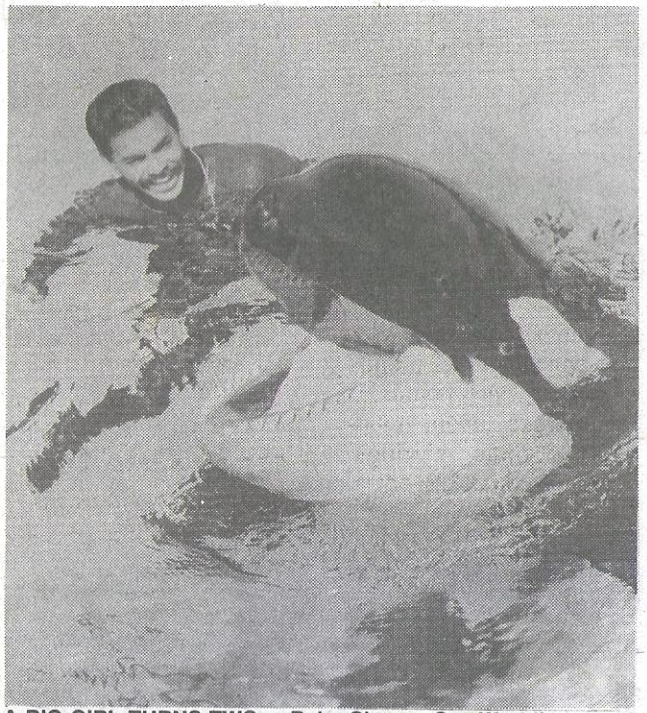
The unqualified success of Sea World's breeding programs was further illustrated with the 1985 birth of a Commerson's dolphin at Sea World of California. The 18-pound male calf was the first ever born outside the wild. Since that much celebrated event, several Commerson's dolphins have successfully given birth at Sea World.

Responsibility for the care of Sea World's marine mammals falls to the park's animal care staff. A state-of-the-art laboratory is available to the animal health technicians, medical technologists, veterinarians and animal care specialists who make up the department.

Another function of Sea World's animal care staff is administration of the park's long-standing beached animal rescue program. Every year, hundreds of ill or orphaned marine mammals strand themselves along the California coast. Sea World rescues hundreds of California sea lions, harbor seals, elephant seals and, occasionally, dolphins and whales. These animals are treated, and whenever possible, returned to the wild.

Although Sea World's inventory of marine mammals is large, it represents only a small portion of the park's marine life collection. Sea World's fish, reptile and invertebrate collections number in the thousands. Specimens hail form virtually every tropical and temperate area of the world.

And Baby Makes Three... Baby Shamu joins Shamu and Namu in an arching leap known as a bow. The whales exhibit their extraordinary power and grace in Sea World's most popular show, "Baby Shamu Celebration." The animals perform several times daily in the park's landmark Shamu Stadium. Though Baby Shamu will celebrate her second birthday in September, she is still dwarfed by the huge adult killer whales.



A BIG GIRL TURNS TWO ... Baby Shamu, Sea World's juvenile killer whale, turned two on September 23rd. Visitors to the marine life entertainment park can see Baby Shamu join Shamu and Namu in daily performances at Shamu Stadium.

The Marine Aquarium is home to a wide variety of saltwater fishes and invertebrates. It is one of the few aquariums in the world where living coral is displayed. This aquarium also houses the stonefish, one of the sea's most venomous fish.

The World of the Sea presents four large aquarium displays: the Coral Reef Exhibit is a re-created tropical reef; the Gamefishes Exhibit houses large yellowtails, giant sea bass and groupers; the California Kelp Bed display re-creates a California coastal ecosystem and the Schooling Fishes Exhibit illustrates how small fish cluster to confuse predators.

Complementing the park's expansive array of saltwater fish exhibits is Sea World's Freshwater Aquarium. This series of small aquariums displays freshwater stingrays, pipefish, piranhas, electric eels and a variety of other freshwater fish.

Perhaps the most awe inspiring showcase of undersea life at Sea World is the Shark Exhibit. Sponsored by AM/PM Mini Markets, the 100-foot, 400,000-gallon main exhibit houses nine species of sharks, including some of the largest specimens outside the wild. A 9-foot lemon shark and two 12-foot sawfishes are among the display's residents.

While Sea World's mammal and fish collections present animals that live all their lives in the water, the park's avian exhibits display birds that depend on the water for survival but nest on land and often migrate thousands of miles each year. Exhibited are myriad ducks, geese, swans, wading birds and penguins.

Sea World's most popular avian exhibit is the Penguin Encounter. Completed in 1983, this Antarctic habitat is home to more than 300 penguins, representing six different species. A seventh species can be found in a separate, outdoor exhibit. The Penguin Encounter is technologically advanced, designed not only for display of these flightless birds, but also for breeding and research. To date, more than 1,000 penguin chicks have hatched at Sea World.

High standards in the care and breeding of animals has earned the park special recognition by the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums. Sea World remains dedicated to the display of some of the most beautiful and interesting animals of the sea. The park's collection provides scientists and visitors alike the opportunity to enjoy and learn about these magnificent creatures.

Reuben H. Fleet Space Theater & Science Center Goes 3-D

A fantastically fun 3-D duo will add another dimension to an autumn visit to the Reuben H. Fleet Space Theater & Science Center in Balboa Park. On Friday, October 5, the first OMNIMAX 3-D film, "We Are Born of Stars," will return along with the new Science Center exhibition, "3-D: A Look In Depth."

When it opened here in the spring of 1987, "We Are Born of Stars" had over 246,800 San Diegans and others seeing "triple" with the help of special red/blue glasses. Audiences reached out to touch atoms hovering around their heads and traveled inside an ice crystal. When it premiered at the 1985 World's Fair in Tsukuba, Japan, it was the number one attraction, screening for more than 1.5 million visitors who waited in line an average of four hours each.

Created entirely from computer-generated graphics, the film takes audiences on a five-billion-year journey through the evolution of life, in just 11 minutes.

It sweeps audiences through the crowded galaxies of space into the microscopic world where the birth of life is depicted. Atoms fuse into molecules which combine to form substances such as amino acids, DNA, chromosomes and cells. From these simple cells, plant and animal forms such as fish, dinosaurs, birds, and finally, humans develop and evolve. The film concludes with a joyful dance performed by computer-animated elephants, giraffes and rhinos.

daily with "Dimensions," a multimedia planetarium show that explains how we fool our brains into seeing three dimensions when there are really only two! Wearing 3-D glasses, the audience will see some spectacular anaglyphic images. As a souvenir, they may take the 3-D glasses home.

Included with a 3-D duo admission ticket, visitors will take a closer look at what makes the magic of 3-D come alive.

In "3-D: A Look In Depth," visitors can manipulate mirrors to reproduce the oldest method of creating the illusion of depth, or use a spectacular Werewolf lightbox that demonstrates how lenticulars are made and how they produce their three dimensional effect. The exhibition offers visitors many hands-on computer activities, a chance to view objects through circular polarizing glasses and to view images via a paired mirrored viewer. It shows how a variety of optical and electronic technologies can create true stereoptic and pseudo-3-D images.

"The KPUG Show" (An Audience Participation Mystery Comedy) Opens The New Valley Playhouse At Town & Country Hotel

Never murdered anyone, you say? Never even thought of murdering anyone? You might have trouble convincing ingenious but more-than-slightly-wacko Detective Roland Beowulf Rasmussen of that. He accuses folks of homicide about as often as Sugar Ray lurches in and out of retirement. Detective Rasmussen's "beat" is "The KPUG Show" (an audience participation mystery comedy), which opened September 21, for an indefinite run, at the Town & Country Hotel's new cabaret-style Valley Playhouse. By the way, it won't help that you're not in the cast. Rasmussen readily detects guilt in audience members, regardless of sex, age, or predisposition to violence.

Audience members witness the KPUG staff handling calls flowing in from varied sources and are asked to comment on callers' queries by host Whit Powers, played by Larry Mendte (Channel 8 Weather Man), and hostess Dr. Leah Mansfield, performed by Sandra Ellis-Troy. Cindy Lu portrays Kimberly, an in-over-her-head Acting Producer of the Whit Powers Show; Patricia Harris-Smith is seen as Alice Pugsley, wife of the avaricious station owner; and Monty Jordan plays Bob Ferguson, KPUG's Sales Manager.

Audience participation begins the moment you exit your car, on the way to the Valley Playhouse, as a picketing KPUG engineer on strike, played by Ron Lang, pleads with you not to attend "The KPUG Show," a fictional talk radio broadcast. And be warned: At any given instance, Nick Jarvis as Detective Rasmussen, may interrupt his zany search for justice, to take the seat next to you for a friendly discourse on mothers, or, without notice, gaze skyward and muse about the importance of friends. This is not your typical theatrical experience.

Performances for "The KPUG Show" are Tuesday through Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 7 p.m., for an extended run. Tickets are $12.50 for Tuesday through Thursday and Sunday performances; $15.00 for Friday and Saturday performances; and may be purchased by calling the Box Office at (619) 232-KPUG (5784). Group discounts are available for as few as six couples. Senior discounts are also available. All shows are cabaret-style, with cocktail service available during performances.

Seaport Village: Great Shopping, Dining and Fun on San Diego Waterfront

Seaport Village has drawn recurring praise from the over 5 million annual visitors and residents alike who have enjoyed the San Diego bayfront attraction since its opening in 1980.

Sunset Magazine called it the "most approachable waterfront on the West Coast" and "one of America's most entertaining waterfronts." Los Angeles Magazine listed San Diego as its Number One Getaway and Seaport Village as its first attraction: "the state's most enjoyable waterfront complex."

Situated on 14 acres fronting San Diego bay, Seaport Village has four miles of walkways, an authentic quarter-mile boardwalk which provides an ever-changing view of San Diego's spectacular waterfront, and beautiful landscaping along cobblestone paths.

Sixty-five of the most unique shops anywhere are tucked in among lakes, ponds, fountains, and an amazing variety of continually blooming flowers. The shops feature an incredible variety of specialty items. Browse through shops featuring mugs, kites, bears, hats, crystal, art glass, men's and women's clothing, games, toys, handcrafted collectibles, swings/hammocks, windchimes, posters, California souvenirs, bookstore/coffee house, nautical treasures, old time photos—the list of unique shops goes on and on.

The most popular of all Seaport's special features is a restored, turn-of-the-century Broadway Flying Horses Carousel which originally ran at Coney Island. The 46 carved animals were the work of a skilled New York craftsman, Charles Looff.

Escape for a couple of hours or have an adventure for an entire day. Ride horse-drawn carriages or fly kites in the park behind the Village. Take a whirl on the carousel or a tour down the boardwalk on a bicycle Pedicab.

There's so much to do, see and enjoy at Seaport Village. Free admission.

Shops open daily 10 a.m. - 9 p.m. Restaurants open late. West Harbor Dr. at Kettner Blvd. 235-4014.

Customers can purchase everything from coffee mugs to colorful T-shirts and bumper stickers, all for left-handed persons.

Many humorous items can also be found in stock, such as left-handed rulers, beer can openers, pen and pencil sets, key chains and calendars.

"We try to keep our merchandising in a light vein," owner Mary Coley explained, "although we do live in a right-handed world. All our highways and automobiles are right-hand designed, plus many other facets of everyday life that tend to cause inconvenience for lefties."

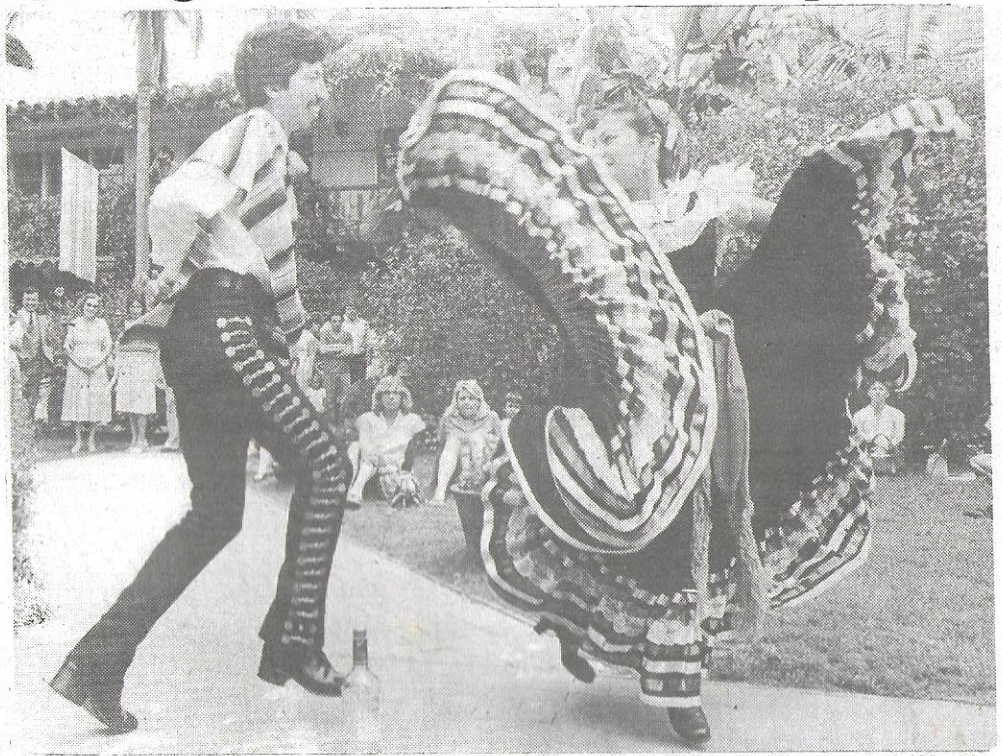
Bazaar del Mundo in Old Town Provides Entertainment, Shopping, Dining for Visitors to San Diego



The contagious excitement of Folklorico dancing fills the lush courtyard of the Bazaar del Mundo, San Diego, every weekend. Flamenco dancers, mariachi musicians and colorful craft displays also entertain visitors to the festive complex of 17 shops and 4 restaurants in Old Town State Park.

While visitng San Diego, don't miss a day at the Bazaar del Mundo and Old Town State Historic Park. Enjoy an interlude packed with gourmet cuisine, lush historical surroundings, unusual shopping opportunities and charming scenery.

Bazaar del Mundo, which originally served as the 'Casa de Pico" hotel, is now a collection of 17 international shops and four exotic restaurants, surrounding a central courtyard teeming with tropical dining, varied menus, and imaginative and colorful surroundings. At Casa de Bandini—the Bazaar's newest restaurant in the former home of Juan Bandini, a man who figured prominently in San Diego's early politics—the menu features gourmet Mexican selections as well as Early California favorites. Casa de Pico specializes in Mexican fare, imaginatively and deliciously presented. At Lino's, try a Northern Italian specialty and at Hamburguesa! one of many different variations on the American classic. All feature entertainment; call for schedules.

Free outdoor activities abound year-round at the Bazaar.

Each Saturday between 1:30 and 4 p.m. folklorico dancing is showcased by the Hispanic Mexican Ballet,

The Bazaar del Mundo is located at 2754 Calhoun St., Old Town State Historic Park. For more information, phone 296-3161.

Old Town's Bazaar Brings the World to San Diego

A favorite among San Diego's long time residents, Bazaar del Mundo in Old Town State Historic Park is a perpetual treat for all the senses, rich with surprises and an exciting excursion that shouldn't be missed. Lush gardens alive with blooming flowers surround a traditional Mexican courtyard complete with gazebo that bursts with colorful and exotic entertainment every weekend. Mariachi music fills the air along with the aroma of fresh homemade tortillas and the famous churros hot from the oven. Nestled within these gardens are seventeen truly unusual shops where you can Fabulous Mexican Folkloric Dancers entertain in the courtyard each weekend, while international shops offer surprising finds.

Since the development of the Bazaar, Old Town State Historic Park averages more than 4 million visitors a year, listing it among the top attractions in San Diego County and the largest concession area in the State Park system.

A stroll through the Bazaar is an event in itself. The courtyard and gardens are ablaze throughout the year with exotic flowers and tropical birds. The shops are meant for browsing, with unique and colorful wares reminiscent of the markets in Spain and Mexico.

When visiting the Bazaar, don't miss at least one of the four restaurants. All feature patio and indoor

Stunning Nativity At Bazaar Del Mundo

The Bazaar del Mundo will once again kindle the Christmas spirit when its massive, stunning Nativity is ceremoniously lit in the Bazaar's gazebo Friday, Nov. 23 at 5 p.m.

Highlighting the festivities, San Diego Children's Chorus will present a repertoire of holiday tunes preceded by a candle-lit procession through the Bazaar's courtyard.

Composed of six larger-than-life-size figures, the drama of the Nativity will be emphasized after dark when a brilliant "Star of Bethlehem" and cascading lights overhead focus on the scene.

Each of the rough-sculpted, softly colored figures in the Nativity was hand-carved by a Mexican artist from a single Sabino tree, a light wood indigenous to Arizona and Mexico.

An audio-track telling the story of the Nativity will play continuously for the entire family's enjoyment.

Commissioned by Diane Powers, owner/operator of the Bazaar del Mundo, the Nativity was first installed in 1985. Since then more than 500,000 visitors have experienced this outstanding work of Mexican primitive art.

The Bazaar del Mundo is located at 2754 Calhoun Street in Old Town State Historic Park. For more information, call (619) 296-3161.

San Diego Zoo is Fun for All the Family

For many San Diegans and Southern Californians, family entertainment can be equated with the San Diego Zoo. The world-famous Zoo is San Diego's leading visitor attraction and will be seen by over three million people this year.

The huge animal collection set among a 100-acre tropical garden, is famous for the many rare and exotic species exhibited. Cuddly koalas from Australia and long-billed kiwis from New Zealand, wild Przewalski's horses from Mongolia and diminutive pygmy chimps from central Africa are just some of the animals seldom seen in zoos which make their homes here. In addition, the Zoo has the largest collection of psittacine birds (parrots and parrot-like) ever assembled.

But also included in the San Diego Zoo's 3,500 animals of 800 species are the ever-popular favorites — lions, tigers, bears, elephants and giraffes. Most of the Zoo's inhabitants are exhibited in barless, moated enclosures which resemble the animals' natural homes in the wild. The city's ideal climate makes it possible for the Zoo to exhibit animals outdoors year round and for visitors to have a pleasant visit no matter what the season.

The easiest way to see the huge animal popular is to take the 40-minute guided bus tour through miles of winding roads down the canyons and up the mesas. Informative and entertaining driver-guides narrate the entire tour and point out interesting facts about many of the buses leave the Zoo station every few minutes for their three-mile trip.

Visitors aboard the new doubledecker tour buses at the world-famous San Diego Zoo catch a glimpse of one of the Zoo's most popular animals, the Koala. Koalas are marsupials from Australia, and the San Diego Zoo is one of only three zoos in the world outside of Australia to exhibit these cuddly critters.

For an entirely different perspective, visitors may take the Skyfari cable lift from one side of the Zoo to the other. The third-of-a-mile ride across the treetops starts at the Reptile House and stretches across the Zoo to Horn and Hoof Mesa. Along the way, riders pass over the Reptile House; Wegeforth Bowl, where free animal shows are offered daily; Monkey Mesa, the huge Scripps Flight Cage; the great ape grottos; the wild sea lion pool; and many of the exhibits on Horn and Hoof Mesa. The bright orange gondolas reach heights of 170 feet above the ground, providing an exciting and entertaining ride as well as convenient transportation.

Another highlight of the San Diego Zoo is its Children's modeled in 1979. Children and young animals see eye-to-eye in this imaginative kid's zoo built to the scale of four-year-olds, but enjoyable to the young-at-heart of all ages. The Children's Zoo features open-moated enclosures, walk-through bird cages, a nursery, direct-contact areas where children may pet animals and see many rare and unusual animals closeup.

Perhaps the most popular area for all in the Children's Zoo is the glass-fronted nursery where young primates and small mammals are bottle-fed and diapered just like human infants.

Among some of the other small mammals you'll see in the Children's Zoo are spider monkeys, squirrel monkeys, river otters and lesser pandas.

Many visitors marvel at the exotic landscaping of the Zoo without realizing that all the developed over the years — they didn't just happen. Fifty years ago, the Zoo's 100 acres were scrub-covered sandy hillsides with few trees. Today, towering eucalyptus and graceful palms, birds-of-paradise and hibiscus cover the Zoo, providing a beautiful garden setting for the animal collection, and incidentally, providing some of the animals' diets. The Zoo's plantings are irreplacable.

The original animal collection was gathered from a scattering of specimens left in Balboa Park at the close of the 1915-1916 Panama-California International Exposition. The Zoo has been in its present location in Balboa Park since 1922.

Help Them To Be Wild And Free

Bob Farner's Wildlife Rescue and Educational Center is an organization founded for the purpose of rehabilitating injured and orphaned wildlife, and educating the public about the increasing need for wildlife protection.

Due to the intensifying pressure on our wild lands, each year thousands of injured, abused, displaced, or orphaned animals are cared for by their center. Without help most would die; as a result of their efforts most are saved. Animals are brought to them directly, or referred to them, by private citizens, agencies, and organizations (such as the San Diego Zoo and Wild Animal Park). They never refuse to help any wildlife.

You can be a vital part of this life-saving process. As a nonprofit organization they teers and donations to perform this vital service. Any contributions of food, assistance, supplies, and money will be greatly appreciated.

Each year they give tours of their facilities to thousands of people. Countless presentations are given to schools, hospitals, businesses, and clubs. All inquiries for educational presentations are welcome!

H & M LANDING OFFERS EXCITEMENT AND FUN FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY

H & M Landing, the oldest and most established sportfishing landing in San Diego, offers a multitude of exciting and fun-filled activities for the family.

For true sportfishing excitement H & M Landing can book you on a one-day trip in search of the catch that helped build San Diego's sportfishing reputation—the albacore! The season, starting in July and running through November, is the hottest time for San Diego sportfishing so early bookings are advised.

But the fun and thrill of sportfishing isn't limited to albacore. Let H & M Landing introduce you to the beautiful Coronado Islands on one of their daily full-day or three-quarter day trips.

With early morning departure times, the fisherman is able to sleep in and still get a full day of fishing in less than a full day's time. The warm water conditions of spring, summer and fall can yield great catches of yellowtail, bonita, barracuda and bass along with other exciting game fish.

The Point Loma kelp beds is another popular destination for the sportfisherman and tourists. These half-day adventures depart daily and allow the fisherman to vie for bass, barracuda, bonita, mackeral and halibut and sometimes yellowtail and white sea bass make a showing.

H & M Landing provides the widest range of sportfishing trips and services available. With their 25 boat fleet, on-site tackle shop, skiff rentals and their captain and crew's combined hundreds of years of experience, H & M truly has something for the entire family.
